Executive Summary

Executive Order No. 2 of Governor Andrew M. Cuomo continued the Joint Enforcement Task Force on Employee Misclassification (JETF), originally established in 2007 by Executive Order No. 17. Noting that employee misclassification has a significant adverse impact on the residents, businesses and economy in New York State, the Order charged the JETF with:

• investigating the practice of worker misclassification;
• coordinating state agencies to ensure enforcement of the laws violated when employers misclassify workers; and
• developing legislative proposals and other tools to combat the problem.

The Executive Order also requires the JETF to issue a report to the Governor on February 1 of each year describing its record and accomplishments, and proposing and identifying mechanisms for improved enforcement by the JETF.

Misclassification occurs when an employee is incorrectly labeled an independent contractor, or is not reported by the employer in any capacity (i.e. “off the books”). This practice hurts the government, which is deprived of substantial revenues due to nonpayment of taxes and decreased legitimate business activity; hurts law-abiding businesses, which must compete with employers who engage in this illegal cost-cutting practice; and hurts employees by denying them the protection of various employment and labor laws and reducing compliance with employment and job safety standards.

In 2011, the Joint Enforcement Task Force on Employee Misclassification continued its efforts to address the serious problem of employee misclassification. The JETF carried out its mission by:

• engaging in joint enforcement sweeps;
• coordinating assignments among agency partners;
• making systematic referrals to appropriate law enforcement agencies; and
• implementing the sharing of data between agencies.

Additionally, with the passage of the Construction Industry Fair Play Act, which was signed into law in August 2010 and went into effect on October 26, 2010, the JETF focused considerable effort in 2011 on ensuring awareness of this new law, assisting employers with compliance of the notice requirements, and ensuring enforcement of the law via investigations and sweeps. In 2011, JETF:

• identified over 19,600 instances of employee misclassification;
• discovered over $412 million in unreported wages; and
• assessed over $14.5 million in unemployment insurance taxes.

Coordinated Enforcement Cases

In addition to the JETF investigations conducted in 2011, the Department of Labor completed 2,255 fraud investigations showing over $327.4 million in unreported wages and over $13 million in unemployment insurance taxes due.
I. Background and Purpose of the Task Force

A. Employee Misclassification Defined

Employers with employees are subject to wage and hour laws, must register with the State, must pay unemployment and social security taxes, must withhold state and federal income taxes, and must obtain workers’ compensation insurance. Employee misclassification occurs when a worker is improperly denied the benefits and protections provided to “employees” as that term is defined by state and federal law. Workers who are classified as employees receive a wide range of legal protections including eligibility for unemployment insurance if they are laid off, eligibility for workers compensation if they are injured on the job and, where applicable, the right to be paid the minimum wage and overtime pay.¹

Workers who are properly classified as independent contractors should be provided with a Form 1099 for tax reporting purposes, but the employer is not responsible for employment taxes and employee benefits.

There are two primary forms of worker misclassification:

Misclassification as an Independent Contractor

This occurs when a worker who meets the legal standards for classification as an employee is instead misclassified as an independent contractor. In New York State, whether a worker should be classified as an employee or as an independent contractor is dependent on what is called the “common law test.” The essential elements of the common law test involve determining whether the worker is subject to the control and supervision of the employer in performing the job, whether the work that is performed is part of the usual work of the employer’s business, and whether the worker has an independently established business offering services to the public, similar to the service they are performing for the employer. The implementation of the Construction Industry Fair Play Act results in a different test applicable to those working in the construction industry, known as the “ABC test.” For additional information regarding this law, see page 7. Ultimately, the question is, who is responsible for this worker’s taxes and bills, if he or she is injured on the job?

A recent study based on audits of New York employment records found that up to 10% of the employees covered by the audits may have been misclassified. Researchers found that misclassifying just 1% of workers as independent contractors would cost the Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund $198 million annually, and that 95% of workers who claimed they were misclassified as independent contractors were reclassified as employees following review. Employers who misclassify employees as independent contractors may do so because they believe that the employees meet the standard for classification as an independent contractor or they may deliberately misclassify their employees in order to evade the regulations and taxes protecting employees.

Since September 2007, enforcement and data sharing activities have identified over 68,100 instances of employee misclassification and discovered over $1.1 billion in unreported wages.

Unreported Employment or “Off-the-Books” Work

This form of misclassification involves employees who are paid “off-the-books” and are not reported at all for tax and other financial purposes. Some of these employees may work for businesses that do not register with State and Federal taxation agencies or do not have workers’ compensation insurance. Others work for businesses that register with state and federal authorities but underreport the number of workers employed by the business.

In 2006 and 2007, several studies were released describing the extent of worker misclassification in New York State. The Cornell University School of Industrial and Labor Relations issued a report in February 2007 estimating that approximately 10.3% of New York State’s private sector workforce is misclassified each year. The report also estimated that approximately 14.9% of the construction industry workforce is misclassified in a given year.

B. Executive Order Establishing the Joint Enforcement Task Force

On September 5, 2007, Governor Eliot Spitzer signed Executive Order #17 establishing the Joint Enforcement Task Force. Governor David Paterson continued the Task Force with Executive Order # 9 on June 18, 2008. Governor Andrew Cuomo continued the Task Force with Executive Order # 2 on January 3, 2011. The six JETF partners are:

- The New York State Department of Labor including the Unemployment Insurance Division, the Division of Labor Standards, the Division of Safety and Health, the Office of Special Investigations and the Bureau of Public Work;
- The New York State Workers’ Compensation Board;
- The New York State Workers’ Compensation Fraud Inspector General;
- The New York State Department of Taxation and Finance;
- The New York State Attorney General’s Office; and
- The Comptroller of the City of New York.

The Commissioner of Labor is designated as Task Force Chair and the New York State Department of Labor Office of Special Investigations is the lead agency coordinating Task Force efforts.

2 Linda H. Donahue, James Ryan Lamare, Fred B. Kotler, J.D., “The Cost of Worker Misclassification in New York State” (Cornell University, ILR School, February 2007).
The Executive Order establishing the Task Force stressed the multiple ways in which misclassification harmed New Yorkers. The practice:

- gives employers who misclassify their employees an improper competitive advantage over law-abiding businesses;
- deprives vulnerable workers of important protections and benefits; and
- deprives the State of substantial revenues.

The Executive Order charges the JETF with:

- Sharing information about suspected employee misclassification violations and pooling and targeting investigative and enforcement resources to address them;
- Developing strategies for systematically investigating employee misclassification within industries in which misclassification is most common;
- Identifying significant cases of employee misclassification which should be investigated jointly, and forming joint investigative teams to utilize the collective investigative and enforcement capabilities of the JETF members;
- Establishing protocols through which individual JETF agencies investigating employee misclassification matters under their own statutory or administrative schemes will refer a matter to other participating agencies for assessment of liability under their statutory or administrative schemes;
- Soliciting the cooperation and participation of local district attorneys and other relevant agencies, and establishing procedures for referring cases to prosecuting authorities as appropriate;
- Facilitating identification of potential violators and the filing of complaints, including soliciting referrals and other relevant information from the public through an advertised telephone hotline;
- Working cooperatively with business, labor, and community groups in identifying and preventing misclassification, educating employers and the public about misclassification, and enhancing mechanisms for identifying and reporting employee misclassification;
- Proposing appropriate administrative, legislative and regulatory changes to eliminate barriers to the Task Force’s operations, prevent employee misclassification from occurring and improve enforcement where such violations are found to have occurred;
- Assessing existing methods of preventing and investigating employee misclassification, and subsequent enforcement actions, and recommending that participating agencies adopt appropriate measures to improve prevention and enforcement efforts;
- Increasing public awareness of the harms inflicted by employee misclassification;
- Working cooperatively with federal, state and local social services agencies to provide assistance to vulnerable populations exploited by worker misclassification; and
• Consulting with representatives of business, organized labor, members of the legislature, and other agencies regarding the activities of the Task Force and ways of improving its operations.

The Executive Order requires the JETF to issue a report to the Governor on February 1 of each year describing its record and accomplishments and proposing and identifying mechanisms for improved enforcement. This is JETF’s fifth annual report. Previous reports described in detail the procedures used to carry out the joint enforcement efforts including how tips and cases are generated, how the sweeps are conducted, and how audits and results are coordinated. Previous reports also described the type of misclassification seen by the JETF and also discussed the extensive cross-training conducted by the JETF in 2009-2010.³

II. Enforcement and Data-Sharing Efforts

In 2011, the JETF continued its joint enforcement and data-sharing efforts. Through joint enforcement sweeps, coordinated investigations, referrals, audit results, and data-sharing, the JETF seeks to ensure an efficient and comprehensive approach to enforcement of misclassification cases ensuring that an employer that is found to be engaging in the misclassification of employees is financially and legally liable for all of the resulting violations. By sharing investigation resources and tips, and by each agency learning to identify violations in other areas, the agencies involved in the JETF are able to do more work with fewer resources.

A. Joint Enforcement Sweeps

In 2011, the JETF conducted 27 joint sweeps bringing the total number of sweeps conducted since the JETF began to 106. Joint enforcement sweeps involve a coordinated visit and inspection of a worksite by JETF members. On nearly every sweep, the sweep teams have included investigators from the Department of Labor Unemployment Insurance and Labor Standards Divisions, the Department of Labor’s Office of Special Investigations, the Workers’ Compensation Board Bureau of Compliance, and the Workers’ Compensation Board Office of the Fraud Inspector General. On sweeps involving public work construction projects and some private construction jobs, the Department of Labor, Bureau of Public Work or the New York City Comptroller’s Office were also included. In 2011 the Department of Taxation and Finance took a more active role in the JETF including participating in unannounced inspections of businesses and assisting in the coordination of investigations. All completed sweep cases in which misclassification is found continue to be referred to the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance for assessment of state income tax owed. Completed unemployment audits are also sent to the United States Internal Revenue Service.

This year, the JETF wants to facilitate closer coordination of agency efforts, including a reworking of the Executive Order to expand its mission and number of agency participants.

1) Results

The 2011 sweeps were conducted at construction sites, restaurants, fairs and festivals, massage parlors, adult entertainment clubs and retail establishments. In 2011, completed audits and investigations of businesses found through the JETF sweeps:

- uncovered over $84.6 million in unreported wages;
- resulted in the assessment of nearly $1.5 million in additional unemployment insurance taxes; and
- uncovered over $640,000 in unpaid employee compensation.

2) Criminal Cases Resulting from Sweeps

In 2011, the Task Force continued to evaluate all sweep cases for potential criminal violations. The Department of Labor’s Office of Special Investigations leads this process. Cases that show evidence of criminal violations are referred to either the Attorney General’s Office or District Attorney’s offices for prosecution.

This year, the JETF wants to establish a Retaliation Unit that focuses on the deprivation of workers’ civil rights that rise to the level of criminality.

B. Coordinated Assignments

Some of the most significant results of the JETF’s work have been in the area of Unemployment Insurance (UI) fraud. The state’s UI Trust Fund currently has a $3.5 billion deficit that has been exacerbated by high unemployment. The JETF’s efforts to secure proper employer payments into the UI Trust Fund help to restore solvency to the UI system.

- In 2011, there were 2,255 completed unemployment insurance audits and investigations that came from tips and referrals.
- The audits and investigations found $13 million in additional unemployment insurance contributions due.

The JETF’s public efforts include a fraud hotline where many individuals, businesses, labor unions and community groups call and provide tips about misclassification. The Department of Labor receives and reviews the tips that come in by telephone, e-mail and letter. Referrals that come in through the data-sharing processes set up with other government agencies are also reviewed.

In addition, the JETF coordinates the investigation and a resolution of cases that do not rise to the level of a sweep. The JETF works to coordinate each member agency’s approach to bad actors and to mediate disputes between employers and employees in cases that do not rise to the level of criminality. In 2011, the number of coordinated misclassification assignments continued to grow significantly. This year the JETF would like to coordinate education efforts for businesses as well.

Internally, the JETF continued to hold bi-weekly meetings with representatives of the Unemployment Insurance Division and brought the Labor Standards Division into the process to ensure that the tips that come in to the hotline are properly screened for possible labor standards and workers’ compensation issues, as well as possible underpayment of unemployment insurance contributions, and that cases containing potential violations in multiple areas are handled in a coordinated fashion. At these meetings, the group also considers cases that come in from local Labor Standards, Unemployment Insurance and Workers’ Compensation offices.

Examples of cases handled include:

- Information from the Workers’ Compensation Board indicated that a tortilla manufacturer had been issued a Stop Work Order. This action was in conjunction with a factory accident in which a worker was killed. Based on information obtained from Workers’ Compensation and the Division of Labor Standards, and news accounts regarding the accident, the employer was underreporting wages. The UI Division found contributions due of approximately $6,600, and determined that a fraud penalty of approximately $3,300 was also in order. This case was forwarded to the Office of Special Investigations for coordination with the appropriate law enforcement agencies.

- Two complaints from workers were received indicating a construction firm was paying wages off the books. Numerous payments to individuals who were misclassified as independent contractors were found in the books and records. The employer had not reported any wages during two years of the audit period, and underreported wages in the third year. Almost $14,000 in contributions was determined due.

- A complaint was received indicating a service station/auto repair shop was paying wages off the books. The employer was unable to provide an explanation for numerous cash payments and payments to unreported individuals in the books and records. Reported payroll was not sufficient to operate the business. Additional contributions of over $8,000 were determined due.

- As a result of a cash wage investigation, a limited liability company operating a restaurant location for a nationally known chain was found to be underreporting wages to its kitchen staff and a manager. Additional contributions of over $2,800 were determined to be due, and a fraud penalty of over $1,400 was also assessed.

C. Construction Industry: Enforcement and Legislative Efforts

Based on research and statistics, the construction industry has some of the highest incidents of employee misclassification. Therefore, the JETF has, and will continue to, focus attention on this industry. The inception of the Construction Industry Fair Play Act in August
2010 has assisted in refining the investigative process by creating a presumption of employment in the construction industry unless an employer can meet the ABC test.\(^4\)

Additionally, the Fair Play Act contains a twelve part test to determine when a sole proprietor, partnership, corporation or other entity will be considered a “separate business entity” from the contractor for whom it provides a service. The Construction Industry Fair Play Act has, and will continue to, make investigation and enforcement of employee misclassification in the construction industry a more precise and uniform process.

The JETF conducted 11 sweeps of construction sites in New York State in 2011.

- Three were conducted in the NYC Metropolitan area which resulted in the initiation of 22 investigations.
- Eight were conducted in upstate NY resulting in 20 investigations.

The sweeps resulted in the discovery of unreported wages, unemployment insurance taxes due, the imposition of fraud penalties and the identification over 150 misclassified workers.

D. Ongoing Department of Labor Unemployment Insurance Efforts

In 2011, the Department of Labor completed over 14,800 audits and investigations, finding nearly 131,700 misclassified workers and unpaid taxes of $48.5 million. The job categories showing the highest incidence of worker misclassification included:

- Administrative and Support Services;
- Professional, Scientific and Technical Services;
- Performing Arts; Spectator Sports and Related Industries;
- Food/Drink Services;
- Ambulatory Health Care Services;
- Educational Services; Construction of Buildings and Specialty Trade Contractors;
- Motion Picture and Sound Recording Industries; and
- Personal and Laundry Services.

III. Data-Sharing

Representatives of the JETF agencies together with representatives of two additional state agencies, the New York State Department of Insurance and the Department of Motor Vehicles meet regularly in a “Forms Team” to discuss the sharing and coordination of forms and information to aid in fraud detection efforts. The Forms Team implements provision 141-C of the Workers’ Compensation Law\(^5\) that allows for the sharing and coordination of

\(^4\) Under the ABC Test, an individual is considered an employee unless he or she is free from direction and control in performing the job, AND the work that is performed is not part of the usual work done by the business that hired the individual, AND the individual has an independently established business.

\(^5\) Section 141-c of the Workers’ Compensation Law: Coordination of forms. The board, the commissioner of labor, the commissioner of taxation and finance, the commissioner of motor vehicles, and the forms to aid in fraud detection efforts. The team has implemented a number of procedures that give agencies access to information contained in each other’s files and to automatically notify partners of fraud found during investigations.

During 2011, the Forms Team:

- Continued to refine and troubleshoot existing agency data-sharing processes to allow for the sharing of the most relevant and beneficial information;
- Continued development of data-sharing agreements between the Department of Labor and the State Liquor Authority and the Department of Motor Vehicles that are currently under review;
- Began development of a data sharing agreement between the Department of Labor and the Department of Taxation and Finance and the Division of the Lottery;
- Developed compliance reviews between partner agencies to develop routine due diligence processes; and
- Continued form and process development and participated in system development to implement the multi-agency Construction Industry Fair Play Act of 2010 (see pg. 7).

Additionally, an enforcement team comprised of Department of Labor’s Public Work, Labor Standards and UI meet regularly to review referral cases from within the DOL to determine penalties for notice and misclassification violations as well as cases referred from Department of Taxation and Finance and the Workers’ Compensation Board.

In 2011, DOL UI issued 50 employee determinations utilizing the employment tests under the Fair Play Act. The DOL enforcement team identified 307 violations of the posting provisions for failing to conspicuously display Fair Play Act posters at job sites. Violation notices were mailed assessing $29,500 in penalties, of which $23,300 has been collected.

IV. Labor Law Legislation

The Wage Theft Prevention Act became effective in April 2011. The Act requires employers to provide notice to employees regarding rates of pay, designated payday, the employers’ intent to claim allowances, and the basis of wage payment. The Act clarifies and expands the Department of Labor’s authority to enforce the Labor Law and expands an employee’s ability to bring complaints and private actions for violations. All private sector employers are covered by the Act. The Wage Theft Prevention Act will assist the JETF in conducting its investigations into employers’ practices, and potentially highlight employers that may be violating the law through worker misclassification.
V. Outreach and National Activities

In 2011 the JETF continued to provide presentations/trainings to various unions, business groups and trade associations across the State regarding the work of the Task Force. At these presentations the attendees are encouraged to contact the Task Force with any leads and/or information regarding worker misclassification. Additionally, at these presentations the Construction Industry Fair Play Act is discussed in an effort to educate attendees on the change in the law, to enhance compliance and to encourage them to be on watch for worker misclassification in the construction industry.

VI. Goals for 2012

The JETF continues to work to decrease the incidence of misclassification through increased enforcement, data-sharing and outreach. In the year ahead, the JETF will:

- Work to establish a Retaliation Task Force;
- Improve and expand its focus on UI fraud and its prevention;
- Focus on the issue of employee misclassification that occurs in conjunction with labor trafficking; and
- Consider expanding the Task Force to include additional members

Enforcement

- Continue strategic and coordinated enforcement sweeps in the construction industry, as well as other industries noted in this report, showing the highest incidents of employee misclassification;
- Identify industry-specific proactive investigations in industries with a high incidence of misclassification;
- Continue to work on effective and coordinated enforcement of the Fair Play Act;
- Continue to pursue criminal prosecutions with local District Attorneys and the Attorney General’s Office in cases of serious employer fraud; and
- Work with other states to pursue employers that operate in multiple jurisdictions.
- Identify whether additional programmatic, legislative, or regulatory fixes are needed to combat employee misclassification.

Outreach

- Continue to conduct outreach to business, labor and community groups to ensure awareness of the Task Force and encourage communication therewith; and to ensure awareness of the recently passed Construction Industry Fair Play Act and compliance therewith.
- Increase outreach to the business community, including small businesses, to raise awareness of the problems of employee misclassification; and prepare additional of the problems of employee misclassification; and prepare additional educational materials for distribution to the public and to employers.

Coordination Between Agencies

- Improve processes for sharing enforcement information and moving cases through the enforcement process; and
- Continue to work on identifying data-sharing processes.

VII. Conclusion

During 2011, the JETF has actively enforced employment laws involving worker misclassification in order to protect workers and law-abiding businesses and to collect taxes due. Through coordinated enforcement and data-sharing between the JETF agencies, we are able to share resources and make all of our work more efficient. The JETF looks forward to continuing its work on this critical issue in 2012.
